Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

On the Way to the Farmhouse
Dickie Tells of the Complete
Victory Over the Leslie Gang

I started to answer Dickie's query concerning our car, but Lillian quickly forestalled me. "Well, show you when we get out of here," she said, evidently not choosing to give away even so minor a secret to Leslie and his chauffeur who though gagged and trussed still had the use of their ears.

Ha! it your own sweet way, Dickie gazed and put himself between us grasping an arm of each of us with one of his hands.

March onward down the field he chanted under his breath. On to the fray! and then he added with a reminiscent chuckle. "I remember the day we made 'em eat that nut mustard sauce."

But his merry mood fell from him as soon as we came into the road. "Make it snappy," he urged. "We want to get out of here."

This way, Lillian said, setting a brisk pace toward the road path where by Jack Leslie's roadster and our car in a wagon were concealed. When we had earned it the space in low tones enough there was no slightest pressure. Neither of the trussed men hearing her.

This is Leslie's runaway, she said. The station wagon is quite a ways back along this road. Dickie frowned as his gaze traveled back along the twisting road path.

A Blocked Road

Not so good, he said, as he stepped on the running board of the runaway. There's no key in here and I didn't feel any on that chauffeur laid when I finished him.

Perhaps he put it in the compartment, I said. I generally do.

He opened the compartment and after rummaging a bit among the papers it contained brought forth a car key.

If this fits, he said as he slipped it to the ignition, you get a medal.

When the motor turned over, we knew that he had found the right key and with it running smoothly, Dickie sent a worried look over his shoulder.

This going to be a slow tricky job backing that station wagon out of there, he said.

No, it isn't, Lillian countered triumphantly. "It's coming out head first. Mudge back it down the path."

My husband sent a glance of admiration at me as heady to me as a draught of wine would have been.

Good girl, he commented. Now I'll run this boat up the road a bit in the opposite direction from where we came in and pull a wire or two out for good measure. It will take quite a bit of starting when they find it. Then I'll beat it back here. Can you two get that station wagon down here pronto?

I imagine we can, Lillian said drily, and on the word we hurried back along the winding path where we had left the station wagon and where we found it just as we had left it. Lillian climbed in beside me. When I had mounted to the driver's seat and starting the car, I sent it care-fully but as swiftly as possible along the twisting path toward the road. Dickie was running in another second he had opened the rear door of the station wagon, climbed in and promptly dropped to the floor, reaching along it in as comfortable an attitude as he could manage.

Back to the Farm

We want to get out of here as quickly as we can," he said. "I don't want a casual glance will ever recognize you two. If you meet anybody pay no attention just keep on driving until I tell you to stop. I'll explain as we go along."

Do we go near the hay wagon? I asked, and at his affirmative, I sent the car swiftly along the road. As we went, Dickie talked quickly but clearly so that we caught every word.

The set up is this," he said.

When they all get to that junction on the road where Dad's extra men are ambushed, there'll be a showdown, but Harry's an old campaigner and he and his men will get the drop on the other fellows. They won't let them up out there if it takes them two put the cars out of commission, long as they're nothing drastic, but effective for the time being. The rest of our gang with the box of emeralds and the imperators of Harry and Neil will wait it to the farmhouse while old Harry with a couple of guards will come back here for me—and for you too.

Then you know we're in here when you said you had a headache? Lillian asked.

EVANGELIST TALKS

ON BIBLE PROPHECY

Asserts Scriptures Pointed to Many Modern Developments.

Many of the prophecies of the Bible are not understood until they are fulfilled. One being fulfilled Rev. C. A. Blackmore File Lutheran evangelist de-livered a message in a vision of the Young People's Fellowship Club of Central Ohio at the Chautauqua yesterday.

Continuing a series of discussions of the Book of Daniel which has been a highlight of the conference this week Rev. Blackmore told several passages of scripture pointing many of the fulfillments of modern civilization such as the speed of transportation, increased knowledge and the ability to communicate with all parts of the world quickly.

All these things don't happen he said. They have a meaning. They come to pass in the last days in a vision of his prophecy in the Great Tribulation.

Speaking last night on the subject of the Ministry of Angels
he said in part:

At the beginning of Creation
there were three arch angels, Lucifer, Michael and Gabriel. If one were greater he was Lucifer but because he wanted to be as great as God he fell and became Satan. He caused other angels to rebel with him and they became demons and evil spirits.

Satan and the other fallen angels have a government that controls the earth while the good angels do the Will of God in heaven.
They are the reapers of God's harvests.

Programs of music at each service were in charge of Rev. Black-more's son Carl Blackmore.
Rev. Blackmore and his son will be in charge of conference sessions tomorrow and Monday.
The afternoon meetings beginning at 2:15 o'clock and the evening services at 7:45.

News Behind the News

Strict Democratic Men Believed To Have Bucked on Roosevelt's Maneuvers.

By PAUL MALLON

CHICAGO, July 20.—The inside story of this Democratic convention is simply told: Mr. Roosevelt was unable to unify the Democratic party behind the third term so he took over its machinery to form what can only be called the Roosevelt third term party.

Hull refused to take the vice-presidency. The President refused to take Garner again. The President found that such a party stranger as Douglas would be too much for the convention to accept. The Garner people did not want their friend Jesse Jones in it. So there was no one left but the agricultural member of the cabinet, Henry Wallace.

Paul Mallon

Parley, the party man was crowded out by his principles. All his friends, making the hard writing on the wall, practically stopped work at the convention. No fully adequate replacement for him could be found. So the President had to make the second best of that. He had to rely solely upon his most devoted friends, to whom there is no principle except Roosevelt, and the opportunists among the politicians who were more anxious for national protection and favors than anything else.

The strict Democratic party men (not alone the conservatives) sat down.

Exclusive Party.

In some ways it looks like a new farmer-labor party, a national uprising vaguely suggestive of the labor party's rise in England. It might grow into that, if successful. Certainly there would be no reason for Mr. Roosevelt to consider any other viewpoint than his own in a third term. He has left no one in his party with whom he would have to compromise, or even consult. He had shed himself of restraints.

The farmer-labor strain does NOT however run either deep or wholly true in the new regime. Wallace does not bring into the organization any farm influence that Roosevelt did not have before.

American Farm Bureau federation, particularly, it does not imply any new farm action. The President may have acquired John Lewis by platform bargaining at this convention, but he already had Lewis' CIO organization with him all along (Murray, Kennedy, Hillman, and the rank and file). What will come out of that in the way of future stronger labor action by the government can not even be guessed now.

So, in the last analysis, while the Wallace and Lewis viewpoints have been pushed further up front by the chairmen elected by the Democratic leaders, they are not bringing him any fresh political strength. There are no more new chairs in the board of management.

Actually Roosevelt has, therefore, come out of the convention with less strength than he had when he went in. He has only made his next party exclusive.

Wallace, a former Republican, is highly respected everywhere in politics for his honesty and sincerity, but not for his political judgment or his ability to handle Congress (the job Garner did well for Roosevelt). Wallace's experience has been in other lines, and if he becomes president some day, he will be a wholly new type.

His selection as vice president, one to Hull was apparently predicated on the hope of attracting the group political votes of Hague and Kelly, and the choice of Farmer Charles McNary by the Republicans.

News-Men Distrusted.
News-men who pass their estimates of public men on to you are apt to become cynical occasionally. They see so much political insincerity they may sometimes see it where it does not exist. But I have never considered a national convention in the past 20 years where they were so unanimous in their cynicism as here.

From a technical standpoint it may be true the Hopps-Kelly-Burns control managed the routine here fairly well for newcomers. They had excellent direction from Washington. They minimized their losses as much as possible by steering up that sincere majority portion of the convention which worships Roosevelt as a bread and butter god.

But if there was a news-man here who was NOT dismayed and discouraged by the callous indifference to facts and common fairness, I did not meet him. Reporters generally do not ask that politicians be candid, but false spectacles such as Mr. Roosevelt, saying he did not wish to run in such a way that he would be drafted was a little too much for most of them to enjoy.

Today and Tomorrow

Both Nominees Believed Men Best Qualified in Their Parties To Deal with Situation Today.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

IN BOTH party conventions this year it has been difficult until the very end to perceive how much the course of events in the outer world was determining the final result of the proceedings. Until Thursday at Philadelphia and until Thursday at Chicago an observer might have thought that the moods and maneuvers of the world, and both conventions were driven by these events to doing what would ordinarily have been regarded as politically impossible.

Under the ordinary rules of politics it is inconceivable that the Republican party would nominate for president a candidate who had just joined the party, had never held office under the party, and had never participated in party affairs. Such a thing has never happened before in the history of American party politics. It would not have happened this year if total war had not begun a month before the convention and if Hitler had not conquered France before the party met in Philadelphia. Wendell Willkie was nominated because all the other Republican candidates had misjudged the course of events, because he alone was aware of them and he alone seemed ready to deal with them. When the convention met at Philadelphia, the choice was between the nomination of Willkie and the disintegration of the Republican party under the impact of events. Mr. Willkie was chosen because he had to be.

Third Term Nomination.
The nomination of Roosevelt for a third term was under ordinary circumstances no less impossible. It may be that a president in office could by the exercise of patronage compel his party to renominate him for a third term. But what he could not do by the exercise of patronage is to get himself renominated without serious opposition. Now the plain truth of the matter is that there was no serious opposition to the Roosevelt nomination, no open resistance on principle and only a little desultory and half-hearted opposition in fact. There was some resentment, there was misgivings, there was certain amount of covert maneuvering which expressed itself in a dispute over the platform, and there was a minor explosion over the vice presidency. But unless there were developments which were not visible to me here in Chicago, there is a less formidable opposition within the party to Roosevelt's third nomination than there was to his second.

The reason is evident. Just as the Republicans had only Willkie, so the Democrats had only Roosevelt. There was no other Democrat available who was prepared for the situation in which the country finds itself had there been such a candidate available he would at least have been brought forward. The fact is that Roosevelt was renominated and the third term tradition was broken because no other Democrat emerged into public view with the necessary qualifications needed in the extraordinary circumstances of the time.

Not All Political Strategy.
We should be deceiving ourselves if we believe and misrepresenting the facts if we sought to explain the nomination by describing the political strategy and the showmanship which were employed in achieving it. That would be partisan blindness. Only the Democratic partisan will pretend that Mr. Willkie was nominated because large financial interests were for him and because many telegrams were sent and because his campaign was conducted so brilliantly. Mr. Willkie was nominated because in his party he was uniquely qualified in the midst of an extraordinary situation. Only the Republican partisan will pretend that Roosevelt was nominated because the city machines were for him, or because the New Dealers organized the pressure group, who have had benefits from the treasury. Mr. Roosevelt was nominated because in his party he was uniquely qualified in the midst of an extraordinary situation.

Both Mr. Willkie and Mr. Roosevelt were nominated because they were the men who most obviously and clearly represented the profound sense of the American people that they are facing one of the very greatest crises in their history. All other considerations become unimportant, and that is why both conventions did such inconceivable and impossible things.

Evidence.
LONGVIEW, Tex.—Curtis Morris, director of an East Texas drive to educate the public about governmental matters, feels he has a good talking point when he discusses waste of taxpayers money.

He found that one small county had bought $385 worth of cuspisods in one year.

TEN YEARS AGO.
It was Sunday, July 20, 1930. The temperature registered 102 degrees in Marion, making it the hottest day in 19 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Leavens and family of Oshawa, Ontario, were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Cecil R. Leavens of Courtland avenue.

Mrs. John Zaccarian of East Church street returned from a two-month visit in Los Angeles, San Francisco and other western cities.

The Forest Towels of Columbus defeated the Marion Steam Show baseball team at Lincoln park, 9-8. Richardson and Simmons pitched for the Marion team.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Earl S. Stouder of Edgewood drive.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.
It was Tuesday, July 20, 1920. A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Osmon of South Prospect street.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Bomberger and daughters returned from a 15-day vacation at Pine Lake, Wisconsin, Mich.

The attending physician reported that Dr. T. H. McAfee, Trinity Baptist church pastor who was stricken by paralysis Sunday, was resting well and that his condition was "as good as could be expected."

At an adjourned meeting of city council an ordinance was introduced to provide for an increase in street car fares from 5 cents to 6 cents. The company sent a communication explaining that more revenue was needed because of increased costs of operation, material and power.

Mrs. Roscoe D. Meager and Mrs. Howard R. Meager gave an informal reception at the Meager home on South Prospect street in honor of Mrs. R. E. Woodruff, who was visiting Mrs. Lowell H. Guthery.

Former Governor Frank B. Willis visited Senator Harding at the Republican campaign headquarters and talked over the national political situation with the presidential nominee. "I have just returned from a trip through the upstate section of New York and found conditions there very very encouraging," Mr. Willis said. He came here from Delaware and was accompanied by Judge Lee Porterfield and Judge E. T. Humes of Delaware.

Other visitors at the Harding headquarters were Col. James D. Darden of New York City, David R. Collins, Detroit businessman, Walter Thomson, publisher of the Delaware Gazette, D. M. O'Daffer of Bucyrus and Dewey Head of Marion county, directors of the Ohio Farm Bureau federation.

A mass meeting was held by Marion women on the campus of the high school building to arrange for entertaining the thousands of women visitors expected here Thursday for the notification ceremonies. The meeting was in charge of the women's auxiliary of the Civic association of which Mrs. J. T. Mathews was chairman. Talks were given by D. R. Crissinger, president of the association, and Dr. C. E. Sawyer, member of the executive committee. Both men urged each Marion woman to "take it upon herself to be a hostess on Thursday and do her utmost to make every stranger feel that she is welcome." Mrs. S. K. Gorham, chairman of the reception committee, urged every officer and worker in the Marion County Red Cross to take an active part in the event Thursday.

Stimson's Unusual Record

Honored by Every President from Roosevelt to Roosevelt.

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON, July 20.—Being appointed to high office by executives of the Democratic party is nothing new to Republican Henry Lewis Stimson.

He has been honored by every president from Roosevelt to Roosevelt. Only in President Harding's administration did he not hold high office and even then he was mentioned for cabinet and legal posts.

The appointment of Stimson as secretary of war isn't even the first time that Franklin D. Roosevelt has recognized the talents of the man who had nothing to do with politics until he was 40 years old. In 1918, Roosevelt named him to the Hague Court and, on another occasion, asked him to be one of two men on an important treaty mission to South America.

So certain must Stimson have been that he would come back to Washington some day that he never relinquished ownership of historic Woodley, a lovely old house on a 16-acre estate at 3000 Cathedral avenue. The rambling old mansion of pre-Civil war construction was bought by Stimson when he was secretary of state under President Hoover. It used to be the summer White House of President Cleveland.

He Rode Into Politics
It's only a stone's throw from the spot in Rock Creek park where Stimson actually galloped into politics. Elihu Root and President Teddy Roosevelt were out for an early morning horseback ride. Root saw Stimson riding across the creek and remarked to the president that he probably would be a good man for the post of district attorney in New York. The president said, "Call him over."

Root bailed Stimson and the latter, disregarding the steep bank, dashed into the creek at breakneck pace, caught up his horse as he stumbled in mid-stream and brought him lathering and rearing up the near bank.

The president cried, "Magnificent horsemanship! Magnificent!" and without further ceremony asked him to take the New York federal prosecuting attorney job.

Stimson probably is the only secretary of war he also held the post under Taft) graduated from the Army War College.

Before that, however, in the World War, as a colonel, he was appointed to the judge advocates division. Then, although over 50, he was assigned to command in the 31st field artillery where he served for the duration and got decorations from both Britain and France.

After he returned he checked in at the war college and completed the super-super army courses that are the last word in military tactics.

Six-Act Plot
By The Associated Press
TULSA, Okla.—Desk sergeant's drama, in six acts (copied from his log):

4:02 p. m. (Saturday afternoon) Sent Detective Lee Pollock and Arthur Selby to answer complaint of east side woman who reported her husband was drinking and was flat on his stomach in the yard. Detectives reported husband "came to" and apologized before they arrived.

4:34 p. m. Woman called again and demanded more police action. Said "he's draped over the fence now and threatening me." He got in car and drove away before officers arrived.

4:45, 5:20 and 5:30 p. m. The same, repeated.

6:20 p. m. Detectives finally found the man in front yard. He looked well and happy. Detective Selby smelled the man's breath and decided he had only one drink or two, not drunk enough to take to jail.

"I might have known it," said the wife. "You men all stuck together."

Dorothy Thompson, whose column, "On the Record," appears three times a week on the editorial page of The Star, has gone on her vacation. She will resume her regular column next week. Miss Thompson has announced she will write occasionally during her vacation. If letters ahead seem to call for her comment and interpretation.

Lighter Side

Convention Isn't All Tap Water and Crusts; Beer and Skittles Come Into Play.

By DAMON RUNYON

CHICAGO A fellow overalls and underwear sleeps at a national convention. After a few years you would think we would know better. But look, Swiss cheese on rye and round slices of Bermuda onion with mustard and four cups of coffee at Harry Russell's 3 o'clock.

Reckon we ought to have the old bean examined. That is, a dietetic har-karl. Should be laid off the mustard. Bad dreams. Dreamed the Democrats had nominated Rose LaRose, the strip dancer, for president. Now where did we get that association of ideas? Oh yes! Rose was one of a flock of strip dancers we viewed in a place on State st. before we went against the mustard. A man has to go everywhere to get political news these days. That place where we saw Rose (Missy's class of '38) is a sort of a safe with a show on an elevated platform. The Damon Runyon management operates the show on the theory that if one strip dancer makes good business, a core of 'em makes better business. The place was crowded. Democratic delegates present were discussing the platform.

The striping began at about 11 o'clock and continued from then on. "But we keep it clean," the master of ceremonies assured us. "That's our motto—Keep it clean!" A Democratic delegate nodded his head and said: "That is a good idea. I think I will mention it to the boys who are writing our platform. Keep it clean!" It is really fine.

ROSE LAROSE seemed to be the star. Some of the delegates thought it would be an excellent scheme for the convention managers to hire her to open the daily meetings at the Chicago stadium with her number. They argue that the Democracy has simply got to find something to stand off Willkie. We left the place rather early not because we were bored. Rose LaRose's performance, but because the seat was so close to the platform we were in constant fear that we might get an eyeful caught in a zipper.

We understand there are a number of tree stumps in the Loop district which run all hours and are fairly well patronized. I thought it might be due to some peculiar appeal in this type of entertainment to Chicagoans. But Nate Lewis, the prizefight manager, a veteran of the Loop, says no. He says they are places in which to catch a few winks of sleep. You can just imagine how blasé the Chicagoans are when they can slumber through garment-moulding by beautiful damozels.

HARRY RUSSELL'S is a bar and restaurant in the Loop and Harry himself is a fellow who used to be an entertainer in the Chicago drums of another era. He sang reasonably sweet songs. Mike Lyman, Alvin Karpis, and a rich restaurant owner out in Los Angeles, was also working around in the Loop deadfalls in those days. Harry opened his present establishment in an old child's, and for a spell was facing increased depression.

Then he remembered the charm of music and installed singers on a stage in the center of circular bar. He ought to knock out $100,000 a year for himself now, which will be hardly money for Harry in playing and laying the horse races. He is an old time plunger, though he would rather let the other guy try to guess 'em. He has a job in Florida last winter.

His place is a poor man's Stork club. It keeps his singers going constantly. The music stops, another starts. Sometimes three or four are all going at once. Naturally the d.n. is terrific. Harry puts all his bartenders through an auricular examination before they go on duty. Their hearing has to be so keen they can hear a pin drop at ten paces. This is to guard against the possibility that 'mid the uproar they might fail to hear a customer remark: "Let's have another."

WE do not claim a musical ear, but we enjoyed the disturbance in Harry's. The circular bar with the singers in the center has its advantage. It enables a couple of hundred customers to cry at the same time against the bar when a singer is giving off "Melancholy Baby." Everybody knows a man cries much better standing against a bar than sitting at a table. (Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Anecdotes of Ohio

By GILBERT F. DODDS

Before he invented the steamboat, John Fitch was an explorer, surveyor and owner of large tracts of land along the Ohio river.

Made a lieutenant in the Revolutionary war. Fitch left the army for the profitable business of selling tobacco and beer to the continental army, and invested his money in Virginia land-war-rants.

He then received a surveyor's commission and, during 1780 surveyed lands along the Ohio river, recording 1,600 acres in his own name. Early in 1782 he made a second expedition, but was captured by Indians and turned over to the British, who held him in Canada for several months. Fitch organized a company to explore and acquire lands of the Northwest Territory, but the venture never materialized.

The Platform

ONE good thing about these foreign policy plank in political platforms—they must leave foreigners in the dark too.

The Democrats, who practically had worked themselves into a white rage over what they said was a weak-worded Republican declaration on foreign policy, labored and brought forth a pledge not to participate in foreign wars, except to give material aid to peace loving peoples, and never to fight outside the American hemisphere, unless attacked. Figure that out. It can be stretched in any direction with equal ease; it is as pliable as a piece of bubble gum in a six year old's mouth. Under the circumstances, the best thing is to forget both foreign policy planks and trust to the good sense that God must have given some men in Washington.

The real cracker in the Democratic platform, when it has been searched all the way from preparedness to the District of Columbia, bears the innocent looking tag—electric power. What it says in effect is that Democratic orators and the party's publicity bureau intend to tee off on Wendell Willkie 24 hours a day as the representative of the public utility business. What it says in fact is that the party stands for everything which Mr. Willkie opposes in the way of driving private enterprise out of the electric power field and is going to campaign on that issue. There never was any doubt this would be so, yet it is edifying to see how quickly Democrats have seized the opportunity to start capitalizing on the politically manufactured unpopularity of a business conducted so well on the whole that politicians have decided to move in on it. It is as unfair to pin the power label on Mr. Willkie as it would be to pin the Wall Street label on Mr. Roosevelt, but Mr. Willkie will have to tend to that.

The other tell-tale part of the Democratic platform is the amount of attention given to farmers. It is evident the party is worried deeply about the farmer, his problems, his vote. Not only does he come first in the platform—right after preparedness and in front of the worker—but he is promised everything in the book from crackers in bed to something for his bunions. Farmers will be flattered by this special attention, which was the idea of the platform builders.

This is not to say the Democratic platform is inferior or superior to the Republican platform. It is to say, rather, that party platforms long since have ceased to compel respect and have invited criticism. Instead their purpose is too obviously to catch votes rather than guide conduct. It was Roosevelt I, who liked to tell what a Pullman porter said on a campaign tour. The President asked to be notified five minutes before the next stop so he could go out on the platform. "I didn't know a platform was something to go out on," said George. "I thought it was something to get in on." Or as a historian of American politics puts it, "On issues which are settled the party speaks in a clear, sonorous voice, but on new issues it mumbles." The Democratic party has ringingly indorsed everything it knows to be popular; on things it's not sure of it has done a fine job of mumbling.

Shame!

THE insult to intelligence delivered by spokesmen for both parties when discussing national defense needs to be jammed back in their teeth. The people have had enough.

Contrary to what Republicans have said, Democrats are not responsible for America's failure to be armed to the teeth when war started. Long after war did start, Republicans still were convinced the Roosevelt administration was going haywire on defense spending; they said so, and they voted so in congress. For that matter, so did a lot of Democrats.

Contrary to what Democrats have said, on the other hand, Republicans are not responsible for America's failure to arm during the post-war period. It was universally hoped during the 20's that war would be outlawed. Republicans entertained this hope. As The New York Times, which saved some old campaign literature points out, Democrats criticized Republicans for not going far enough with disarmament.

There was no need to arm till Hitler came to power in 1933. The United States was caught short by Germany's strength. So were Great Britain, France, Poland and a baker's dozen of little countries which had a lot more reason not to be caught short. Politicians in this country who can't find anything to do but blather recriminations for a mistake everybody had a hand in should button up. A dictator might get wind of what they're saying and yell, "There, what did I tell you about democracy?"

Hitler's Speech
Makes No Change
In War Situation

By DEWITT MCKENZIE
Hitler's peace-speech leaves the situation just where it was unless the British government sues for terms—something which Premier Churchill less than a week ago declared never would happen. This being the case Europe must endure a conflict which as Hitler says can end only with the complete annihilation of one or the other of the two adversaries. Well, that's what this war started out to be—a fight to a finish between Germany and England—and that's likely to be the way it winds up.

Hull Expected To Have Proposals To Keep Western Republics Safe.

HAVANA, July 20—The conference of American republics, called at Washington's suggestion after Nazi invasion of the low countries to discuss western hemisphere defense and economy looked to U. S. Delegates expressed a hope that Secretary Hull, arriving on the Steamer Florida for tomorrow's opening session also would produce a solution to the problem of bringing Argentina into line with her 20 sister-republics. Argentina frequently has expressed unwillingness to cooperate in any plan which might jeopardize her trade relations with Europe's totalitarian states.

Czech Leader Sees Consequence If England Falls.

By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND, July 20—If England falls in the coming blitzkrieg, the United States is next on the program of Nazi Germany, said Jan Mysark, former Czech minister to London and son of his nation's founder. The Czech leader, who arrived in Cleveland last night in a speech before nearly 1,000 Clevelanders of Czech and Slovak origin. He expressed the belief that England will triumph, however. She may have a tough time but she can and will repulse the Nazi attack and will come out victorious in the end, Mysark declared.

His opinion contrasted sharply with that of Miss Theodora Johnson, Cleveland singer just returned after a year and a half in Europe.

Miss Johnson, whose soprano voice has been impaired and perhaps destroyed by several months war work with the Red Cross in France, believes England is doomed. While with the Red Cross, Miss Johnson caused the arrest of a spy. She had been informed a Belgian officer had been slain for passport papers and that an impostor might attempt to pass through a station outside Paris where she was working.

Police were summoned and took the spy in custody. After spending the week end at her parents' farm at New London, O., she plans to report to the Red Cross in Washington.

CONGRESS UNLIKELY TO CLOSE SESSION

Most Members Will Conduct Campaigns from Capital.

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, July 19—Taking their cue from President Roosevelt, most members of congress talked today of combining a national political campaign with a continuous session of congress.

It is anybody who proposes to adjourn with the present temper of the country, said Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.). "I know the Democratic ranks," Senator George (D-Ga.) predicted, "that the pending excess profits tax proposal, compulsory military training and an assortment of defense measures would keep legislative machinery busy for many weeks."

With both major political conventions out of the way, congress will reassemble Monday after nearly a month of slight activity. If members centered attention on new tax levies aimed at any heavy profits created by the multi-billion dollar preparedness program and intended to supplement the $1,000,000,000 national defense tax measure recently rushed through congress.

anti-aircraft defense and supply stations sunk a 5,000-ton merchant ship, damaged three other vessels and a destroyer.

In these forays said the high command, only three German planes were lost against 27 British planes shot down.

In the Italian-British naval warfare in the Mediterranean in the Italian high command admitted the loss of the Cruiser Bartolomeo Colleoni but at the same time claimed that a British warship had been sunk by bombs in a three-hour fight.

In Berlin, informed German sources said any British hint of interest in Hitler's offer would hold off for the time being the long threatened mass attack on the British Isles.

High Command Changed While Britain took another step toward meeting that attack, whenever it may come, by shaking up her high command, Secretary of State Hull arrived at Havana for the Pan-American conference on hemisphere defense and economy—bringing with him, the defense hoped, some plan for future action that might curtail Germany's unwillingness to go along in any measure that might hamper her trade with Germany and other totalitarian nations.

To acquire for $600,000,000 a total of 15,000 airplanes, fifty percent more than the previously authorized maximum. If the President deems them necessary even more may be ordered.

To expedite the construction of the midget fleet, the new act authorizes an appropriation of $100,000,000 for essential equipment and facilities at either private or naval shipyards, an additional $50,000,000 for expansion of facilities for the production of ordnance and munitions at either government or private factories and $35,000,000 to expand the nation's limited armor plating plants.

Besides the 200 combat ships the law also authorizes construction on expansion of 100,000 tons of auxiliary vessels such as tankers, seaplane tenders and repair ships and a $50,000,000 fleet of small patrol and escort vessels and motor torpedo boats.

The huge armada with greater range and striking power than any other in the world's history was designed to enable the navy to meet attacks in the Atlantic and Pacific at the same time it necessary and to meet the enemy 1,000 miles or more from this country's shores.

The new law authorizes a 70 per cent expansion of the fleet which would add 1,250,000 tons of combatant ships to the navy. For reasons of military secrecy, the exact number of each type of ship in the new program was not disclosed. By tonnage, however, the increase in each major category would be as follows:

Battleships 10,000 tons aircraft carriers 200,000 tons cruisers 420,000 tons destroyers 250,000 tons and submarines 70,000 tons.

WESTERN STOCKMEN HEAR WILLKIE TALK

Candidate Returns to Colorado Springs from Denver.

By The Associated Press

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., July 20—Wendell L. Willkie sold back into his vacation routine today after devoting in a brief address at Denver he would make no pretense of noble motives in seeking the presidency.

I frankly sought the opportunity to run for president on the Republican ticket because I have some deep seated convictions I want to present to the American people and I will do it in an elected I want to carry into execution the principles I hold.

Willkie made the talk while a luncheon guest yesterday at the Denver union at skyscraper. He conferred informally with cattle and sheep men and visited a beet sugar plant, the federal veterans hospital near Denver and an 80-acre beet ranch and a farm before flying back to Colorado Springs. He said he planned to get a good rest over the weekend.

While at Denver Willkie received a telegram from Don H. Burton, a friend now at Bonhamton Grove, Calif., advising him that Irvin S. Cobb, the Paducah, Ky. humorist intended to support the Republican nominee as a real fellow Democrat.

A truck bed with loads of hay around the edge served as a speaker's platform for the Republican nominee when he addressed the luncheon gathering at the stock yards. He said:

"I know something about the Democratic way of life not from books or theories but from experience. I know the democratic way of life as an experience. I have worked on the ranges and the farms. I learned about civil liberties not in textbooks, but in a hard struggle for survival."

I know your aspirations and your hopes. I know you realize that this great democracy shall be preserved at all hazards.

If you elect me president you will have someone who understands the everyday problems of everyday people. I have lived them and glory in it. My route was the hard route, not the soft one."
